BY ONE OF THE GARRISON.

"Oh! the children of the Lord have a right to shout and sing,
The way is growing brighter, our souls are in the wing;
And we're going by-and-bye to the palace of the King,
Glory to God! Hallelujah!"

DEAR MR. EDITOR.—Our Anniversary Demonstrations in Quebec have been simply marvellous. It is said that the pen is mightier than the sword, but I am beginning to ascertain that many of the scenes and events which constitute this great Salvation war are getting light of civilization has shone on our fair Dominion, that such heathenish brutality could be perpetrated, especially by those who were the first possessors of the picturesque Province of Quebec.

At two o'clock the French and English corps moved in procession to Pointe L...

We felt secure under our own roof, and every Salvationist threw his spirit into the joyful strain of praise which permeated every song and prayer.

The Commissioner's lecture was on Progress. He said that the Salvation Army had come to Quebec for a purpose—for the Salvation of the people—and were determined to work with unflinching zeal towards that aim, even though some of them might have to seal with their blood the altar upon which they had dedicated themselves.

As the close of the meeting one soul sought pardon at the Cross.

Bandman Hatemian from Montreal received an awful crack on the head rendering him helpless and insensible for two hours. After lying in the basement of the barracks for some time he was carried to a house, and, we are glad to say, was sufficiently recovered next day to leave the city.

Private Law, of Quebec, was badly cut about the eye, and was delicious for four hours afterwards. The Quebec drummer sustained serious injuries. Cadet Fella, of Montreal, was struck in the head and face by stones four times. Captain Young's cheek was cut open just below the eye, and Lieutenant Mexico was badly hurt.

Him, He did. A dash across the road brought us to the house of a dear man, where we were taken in and refreshed, and then, disguising ourselves, we again came into the street to make our way to the barracks. Major Adjutant VanAllen and several others with their wounds dressed just returning.

It is only then that we learned what had become of our other comrades. They had had a terrible fight. One Russian had the Commissioner by the whiskers, but was pulled away before he could do anything. The girls took refuge in several stores, and in some stores they were refused admission and turned away in the mercy of the mob.

These all made their way to the barracks and the buglers and men were about the last who arrived. The mob followed us right to the barracks, and, we were told, intended to attack us again when we came out. I guess the reason they didn't is because there were no walls near which they could get behind.

THE BATTLE OF THE BASILICA.—Quebec, Aug. 25th, 1887.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

The wounded are all progressing favorably and are being

"- the day, but, Mr. Editor, my hand tremble to describe the dark scenes that followed a night. Several times had we received the serious warning: "For God's sake, don't go down into St. Roch's, or you will be killed sure!" We had no intention of going into that quarter, but have since learned that it

Our time of march lay, not through St. Woch's, but up "Rue St. Jean," one of the principal streets of the city. Mounting a hill to St. Louis street, a little disturbance occurred which was soon quieted and all was thought to be quiet.

To this we willingly yielded, and were jostling quietly past the church when a blood-thirsty mob rose from their ambuscade bobbing under cathedral eaves and, a moment later, swarms and clubs were flying in all directions. Adjutant Voe Allen was felled with a stone indicating an ugly gash beheld the ear that was wounded, but in all, twenty-one received injuries.

God saved our lives. Stones were rattling against the instruments, steel and wood, comrades reeling with a blow.

At last we thought we were safe, and were just beginning to take it easy when we heard another crowd at a corner where we had to pass. The first who passed the corner received a terrific volley. What were we to do? The crowd following behind us threatening our back and another in front of us with

A sudden rush, and all the boys get through except the Boy Bagler and myself, who took refuge up a dark, narrow passage between two buildings. Two gentlemen stood at the mouth to protect us. The mob found out we were in there, and several came up with stones seeking to enter, but were nobly driven back by our friends. We did not know whether it would be life or death for us, but we moral God to deliver us which then escape punishment, and have brought counter charges, and wonderful stories have been told of imaginary revolvers, etc. Captain Young has been dispatched from Osnaburgh where he had gone for rest, to identify his assailants, and we are assured that there will be ample evidence to satisfy any unprejudiced reader as to the guilt of these rascals in the mind as to the guilt of those already in the hands of justice. Of course it is only the ringleaders in the actual violence that have been identified, and no doubt scores equally guilty will escape all punishment. This must of necessity be the case, but the most deplorable part of it is that the investigators and wire-pullers, as is always the case in such affairs, must rest in security while their deluded dupes pay the penalty of their cowardice.

QUEBEC OUTRAGE.—The General was galled the news of the Quebec riot and the wonderful escape of the Commissioner and others, and the following cable was received in reply: "Hallelujah! No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper. General and English commands send salutes."
